ORGANS.
A LEADING EASTERN PAPER SPEAKS AS follows of the great Eureka Organ: There is nothing so humanizing, so beautiful, so elevating as music, and nothing that we heard for many years comes so near the perfection of sweet sounds as the Eureka Organ, made by Shoninger & Co., New Haven Conn. This instrument has the new Vox Humana Stop, which is such addition to the old organs as to enhance their worth fifty fold. This stop creates, by a fan, a trill like unto the warbling of the whole feathered tribe, doing away with the bellowing hoarseness so detrimental to wind instrument. The volume of music it gushes forth is powerful, rich, and full of pleasing melody, such as entrances the senses and intoxicates the ear. No person would think of weariness, where a performer was touching the pearl keys of the Eureka.

THE MUSIC MISTRESS.

CHAPTER I.

I was about sixteen when I was invited by my aunt, Mrs. Morton, to stay with her for a few months at her house, in that pleasant region of London, the neighborhood of Regent's Park. I was a country bred girl, and had never so much as once visited the great city. I had all a novice's ideas of its galeties and splendors, and thought of them, with almost awe as well as curiosity.

I pass over my anticipations of that visit, my arrival in London, the more than fulfilment of some of my dreams, the dissipated illusions of others.

My aunt, by her second proposal that I should take music lessons in all the usual accomplishments, showed her opinion of the education I had received from a country boarding school.

Of my numerous other masters and mistresses I need not speak—I have long forgotten their very names; but of my music mistress, Grave Harvey, of whom this little record is told, I have the most distinct recollection from the very first hour in which I saw her pale face, her great sol emn eyes, that yet sometimes lit up into wonderful beauty, her firm mouth, her tall lithe figure.

"Well," said my aunt, when Miss Harvey took her departure after the first lesson was over, "if that young lady has such a large connection, and so much reputation as an instructress, as Mrs. Rupert tells us, I wonder she does not dress a little better. A certain appearance is incumbent upon every one according to their means, and Miss Harvey's dress is disgracefully shabby.

"It was not very nice," I answered; "but, oh! aunt, what splendid eyes she has—that is if they were not so full of care."

I was young and enthusiastic in those days, and before [illegible] I had contracted an ardent admiration for Miss Harvey, which now ripened into a passionate girlish friendship that made my aunt angry, and Fred laughed kindly.

"Come, Chattie," said he one day, "you shall introduce me to the lady of the handsome eyes and the shabby gown."

"It is very heartless of Aunt Kitty to talk so much of Miss Harvey's dress," I cried. "If she is poor, is that her fault? She is far finer lady in her poor worn dress than many of my aunt's friends who come here in rustling silks and satins. And you, Fred, I am ashamed of you. Once you did not think a lady made by her dress.

"And perhaps I don't now, either, Chat," said Fred; "and hope I should be the last man in the world to sneer at poverty."

"Grace Harvey has no relations, and she lives in one room, all alone, up ever so many stairs, in such a dark, dismal little street; oh, Fred! it almost stifles me to think of it," I said eagerly. "I met Grace on the street one day, and it rained, and though I think she would have rather not, she took me for shelter to her room. When I saw what a poor low place it was, I felt as if I ought never to have seen it."

"Poor thing," said Fred, heartily.

"Well, Chattie, we have no right to pry into her secrets, or wonder why, with a large number of pupils, she could be so poor!"

My indignation much soothed by Fred's feeling and good nature, I introduced my brother to Miss Harvey, and noted with a thrill of pleasure how his bow was as gracefully deferential, his manner as cordially respectful to the poor teacher of music in her worn garments, as ever I had seen either to the most distinguished of my aunt's fashionable friends. Miss Harvey soon dropped, too her rather sad reserve of manner with him, and as Fred was about this time, for some reason or other, a very dutiful nephew and a most attentive brother, I had the pleasure of seeing the acquaintance between them improve rapidly. How Fred managed to time his calls so exactly to my music lessons is not for me to say, though I was a great deal too shrewd not to notice the fact very speedily; and oh how pleased to draw my own conclusions from it. It seemed to me, young and enthusiastic as I was, the most natural and desirable thing in the world that my darling brother should fall in love with and marry my dearest friend—music mistress though she was. While pretty sure of Fred's feelings in the matter, I was by no means so confident of Miss Harvey's. At first she had seemed quite pleased with Fred, but by degrees the old sadness and reserve crept back into her manner; and, indeed, after a little while I could see that she plainly avoided him.

One night, to my unbounded delight, Fred took me to a concert, and when the first part was over and I was able to spare my attention to the audience, I commenced a very admiring survey of the house.

"Dear me," I exclaimed in two or three minutes, "did you ever see such a likeness?—There, in the fourth row from the end. Oh! she has turned her head away now; but I could almost say it was she."

"She! who, my dear?" inquired Fred.

"Grace Harvey"

"Grace Harvey! where? What, that girl in white silk, with those splendid flowers? Indeed it is something like. Ah! now she has turned her head. Marvelously like her. I wonder who the world it is. Is it Miss Harvey?"

"Nonsense, Fred! said I laughing. "How can it be poor Grace? Do you think she can afford first-class concerts and white silk dresses?"

But after this I and the concert got but a very divided attention of master Fred.

On the occasion of my next music lesson I did not forget to tell Miss Harvey of the lady so closely resembling her, whom I had seen at the concert, and to my great surprise, looking at my friend the while, I saw that her pale face flushed suddenly and deeply, and for an instant she seemed confused and vexed.

"The resemblance must have been strong indeed, to be visible through all the difference of dress. I ought to feel more complimented than I dare say the lady would be, if she could know, Chattie" was all she replied, and we spoke of it no more.

But one day, not very long after that, Fred came to me in some trouble and excitement.

"Chattie," said he presently, "I am going to tell you a secret. Will you be very much surprised if I tell you that I love Grace Harvey dearly, and that I have asked her to be my wife?"

"Not surprised, but so glad—oh, so glad?"

"Wait," said he, and though he smiled he looked vexed too. "It is true that I have asked Grace to marry me; but, Chattie, she has refused, in the most unqualified manner.

"Oh, Fred! and I am sure she likes you. It is some scruple about difference in rank, I daresay. Haven't you found out how proud Grace is?"

"To be sure I have. But I don't think it is that either; for I asked her outright, and I could not help thinking that my doing that made her think of it for the first time. No! I fancy that was her reason; and, Chattie, this is where you can help me. I could not press Grace for her motives, but you might ask questions that I could not. Try and come at her reasons, will you?"

"But Fred, I am not to see Grace for more than a fortnight, for the new piano comes home."

"Oh!" said poor Fred, with a dismay, "I cannot wait that long; make some excuse for going to see her."

What could I not have done for Fred? I ran away to put on my things, and Fred and I were soon in the dingy street in which the house at which Miss Harvey lived. Fred rang the bell and inquired for Miss Harvey of the little boy who opened it.

"Yes, Miss Harvey was in—I walked up!"

Stumbling up the dark and [illegible] case after the small handmaid, [illegible] arrived at Miss Harvey's door. The child knocked; but as there was no answer she opened it and told me to walk in. I did so—there was the low ar[illegible] which I had often thought of with [illegible] I stood transfixed with grief for that instant a door [illegible] room opened, showing [illegible] glimpse of mirror-gliding [illegible] within, and Grace herself [illegible] in an evening dress, with [illegible] and stately neck stood in the [illegible] in turn looked more than [illegible] frightened. As she saw the door behind her quickly, [illegible] crimson as she faltered—

"Chattie, is it you?"

I was so utterly bewildered [illegible] —the discrepancy between her apparent professed poverty, [illegible] rand badly enough. I dare say Grace's face seemed to grow cold and ster[illegible] ed and replied sternly that "Miss Talbot must consider her decision final, as [illegible] was."

Poor Fred! I told him all I [illegible] I gave him her answer, and [illegible] of Grace Harvey after. My [illegible] came to an abrupt close soon [illegible] my friendship for my music [illegible] only a memory.

CHAPTER II.

It was some years after this that my brother and I—now a grave lawyer [illegible] in business—paid a visit to the [illegible] cathedral town where we were born.

One evening—a summer evening full of tranquil beauty, I remember—we sauntered under the shadows of the cloisters. I noticed the figure of a woman sitting on one of the stone benches beneath the [illegible] looking out over the graveyard beyond, where the long sun-shadows were growing dim in the fading light. Something in the figure attracted me, and as we passed I looked into her face. I knew her instantly; yes—[illegible] worn, faded, shabbier in dress even than [illegible] I knew Grace Harvey; and so touch[illegible] I, too, by something inexpressibly [illegible] hopeless in her wistful face and weary attitude, that forgetting the awkwardness of [illegible] meeting, accompanied as I was, I stood still and said involuntarily—

"Grace Harvey!"

She looked up hastily, and by the color that flushed into her pale, thin face, I saw that she recognized us. It was a very awkward meeting, but the good breeding and self-control of the two most concerned, made it pass off better than one [illegible] hoped.

Miss Harvey was not [illegible] Beansbury—no, only born [illegible] She had known the [illegible] it dearly.

I, [illegible] the ending of the story? and that Grace has been for some years, my dear [illegible] and Fred's happy wife!"

EARTHQUAKE.

Disastrous Earthquake in California—Twelve Shocks During the Day—Houses Thrown Down and Lives Lost—Business Nearly Suspended.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 21.

This evening the streets were crowded with an excited multitude discussing the particulars of a disastrous earthquake. Twelve shocks were felt during the day. The general direction was northerly and southerly, though some descriptions give it a rotary motion. The greatest damage extends in a belt several hundred feet wide, running about northwest and southeast, commencing near the Custom House and ending at Folsom street wharf, injuring and demolishing some twelve buildings in its course. On the corner of market and First streets, the ground opened and a fissure several inches wide and forty or fifty feet long opened. Other places where the ground opened water was forced above the surface. The City Hall may be considered an entire wreck. Courts all adjourned.—The prisoners were taken from the Station House to the county jail. All the patients of United States Hospital were removed from the building, which was declared unsafe. The chimney of the U. S. Mint is badly damaged and the establishment closed for repairs. Hager's type foundry suffers greatly. The Lincoln School House was badly damaged, and the large statue in front of the building quite ruined. The General Delivery Postoffice has temporarily suspended. The San Francisco Gas Works suffered severely, and the chimney being thrown over fell through the roof. The Mason Woolen Mills were considerably damaged. The large chimney of the sugar refinery on Eighth street was badly cracked, the gable end of the girls side of the deaf and dumb and blind Institution fell in, crushing through the ceiling, and many chimneys in the southern part of the city were thrown down. No one was seriously injured by them. Only four lives are as yet known to be lost, although numbers are seriously injured by the falling debris.

The waters of the Bay were perfectly smooth at the time of the shock, and no perceptible disturbance took place. The shock was felt aboard the shipping in the harbor, as if the vessel had struck on a rock. The earthquake was severe in the interior. Heavy shocks were felt at Sacramento and Stockton. Costa and Alameda Company's building was thrown down, and several lives were lost.

The Mare Island Navy Yard experienced two heavy shocks. Several Chinese were thrown down, and some buildings considerably shaken, but no serious damage was done, and no one was injured. At Vallego chimneys were demolished but no serious injury occurred. At Redwood city the large brick court house is little better than a wreck, and all the county offices moved out. At Marysville light shocks were felt. At Grass Valley the shock was severe. There was a light shock at Donard. Throughout the day business was nearly all suspended in this city, and none but retail establishments were open. The Chamber of commerce held a meeting to-day and resolved to telegraph to the Chambers of New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, London, Paris and Hamburg, an account of the disaster. Another shock was just felt at 7 P. M.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

There was a trial and execution in Dublin, more than a century since, which excited great interest. It was that of a surgeon, well known in society, and esteemed for his amiable character, and remarkable for his humanity to the poor; he lived in a retired state. It happened one evening that the milk-woman found the street door ajar, and not being answered when she knocked at it, she made her way to the kitchen. She had no sooner entered it, than uttering a piercing scream, she called loudly for help. The young woman, who was servant to the surgeon was lying on the flags, while her dress was stained with the blood which had issued from a wound in the side. In looking about the floor, a surgical instrument was found, which also was stained with blood.

A medical man who was present ascertained that it was the instrument which had inflicted the death wound. On a further search, a shirt, saturated with blood, was found huddled up in the coal hole; it was marked with the initials of the surgeon's name.

He was immediatly seized, and, though protesting his innocence, he was evidently under great agitation. The silent witnesses which were brought against him were thought sufficient to prove his guilt, and all attempts to account for their having been found near the unfortunate girl were scouted in the cross-examination.

A living witness was produced in court, an old lady who deposed that she lived in the house directly facing that where the surgeon resided; that her drawing room window commanded a view of his premises, and that it was customary with her to watch his movements. She deposed that she had not taken her eyes off of his house all that day on which the murder was perpetrated; that no one left or entered the house that day but himself; that he went home at about four o'clock, his usual hour for returning; and that, on knocking at the door, it was opened by the servant, who, to the best of her belief shut it fast when her master went in; and that she saw him three or four times pass the windows of his sitting room; that the last time she saw him was about half an hour before the murder; that she observed him look down both sides of the street, and then shut down the window; he held something in his hand, which she thinks may have been a surgical instrument; but this she would not positively swear.

In summing up the evidence, the horror which the prisoner had betrayed, when looking on the body of his murdered servant, was eloquently dwelt on as a crowning proof of guilt. The defence was weak and meagre—a bare denial of the crime being its chief substance. A thrill of horror pervaded the court. The jury retired, a brief space sufficed for deliberation—they returned with a verdict of "guilty." The Judge having donned his black cap, exhorted the prisoner on the heinousness of his crime, and pronounced the fatal sentence.

It is said that the condemned showed much fortitude throughout, and persisted to the last in asserting his innocence. He was brought to the place of execution amid a vast concourse and the execrations of the people. We were told by an old gentleman that his father remembered having been held up in his nurse's arms to see the procession pass to the place of execution. He was often spoken of in the social circle as one who had been in much estimation. His untimely end was lamented, but there were few who believed it undeserved.

It was after the lapse of several years that some one who had emigrated to America returned. He was ill and troubled in mind; something lay heavy on his heart and disturbed his conscience; he made his confession to his priest: He had been the "sweetheart" of the murdered girl; she had let him in by the back way; early in the evening, to take tea with her. As they sat side by side, he asked her for a kiss, which he would have snatched when she denied him: she took up her master's surgical instrument, which lay on the table beside her and she pointed it towards him jestingly: in a struggle she fell on it, and it pierced her side; he snatched the shirt, which she had in her lap to mend, and staunched the blood which was flowing with it; but life soon ebbed away, and he saw the girl that he loved—who had been laughing and talking with him but a few minutes before—lying dead beside him; his agony only gave way to the instinct of self-preservation, when he thought he heard the sound of approaching footsteps; he thrust the blood-stained shirt into the coal hole, and setting the hall door ajar, he concealed himself behind it, and when the crowd had collected on hearing the alarm, he mingled with it, and then passed into the street, and on to the quay, and getting on board an American ship, he sailed in a few hours. When he learned that the surgeon's life had been forfeited, he was overwhelmed with anguish. The only reparation in his power was to clear his character from the dreadful imputation; but though he felt a relief in this act of justice, yet he could not undo the Injury inflicted.

JOSH BILLINGS ON CROWS.

Next to the monkey the krow has the most devilty to spare. They are born very wild, but can be tamed as easily as a gote kan; but a tame krow is actually worse than a sore thumb.

If there is anything about the house that they can't get into, it is because they think it ain't big enuff. I had rather watch a district skool than one krow.

Ktows live on what they can steal, and they will steal enything that ain't tied down.

They are fond of meat vittles, and are the 1st to hold an inquest over a departed horse or a still sheep. They are a fine bird to hunt, but a hard one to kill; they can see you few miles just, and they will smell a gun right thru the side of a mountain.

They are not songsters, altough they have a good voice to cultivate, but what they do sing they seem to understand thoroughly; long praetice has made them perfect.

The krow is a tuff bird, and kan stand the heat like a blacksmith and the cold like a stone wall.

The bild thare nest among a tree, and la twice and both eggs would hatch if tha was lade in a snow bank. There ain't no such thing as stopping a young krow.

Krowze are very lengthy, I believe tha live always. I never knu one to did a natural death, and I don't believe tha knu how.

Tha are awlus thin in flesh, and are like an Injun rubber shew, poor inside and out.

Tha are not considered fine eating, altho I have red sumwhare uv bild krow; but still I never heard uv the same man hankering for sum bild krow 2 times.

This essa on the krow kopid from nature and if it iz true, I ain't to blame for it; nature made the krow, I didn't. If I had I would hav made her more honest, and not quite so tuff.

A boy entered a stationery store the other day and asked the proprietor what kind of pens he sold. "All kinds," was the reply.—"Well, then, I'll take three cents' worth of pig pens."

BLITZ AND THE [illegible] WIGS.

Blitz! The very name is synonymus with witchcraft and roguery. What a twang of jugglery there is in its pronunciation—presto change—magical words in themselves, are no more identified with miraculous deeds than that of Blitz. He is the prince of conjurors, and adds to his wonderful dexterity at legerdemain, the most remarkable power of the human voice, known as ventriloquism. Blitz is an errant joker and loves to carry out a practical joke of fun. For some weeks past he has been frightening the market men in New York by causing their dead poultry and dressed pigs to talk all sorts of stuff, and to make formal complaints of the untimely end to which they had been brought. One butcher after throwing a half dozen turkeys into the street because they would gobble; though they were as dead as a door nail, was saluted with a terrible grunt from a young pig that he was offering for sale, all cleaned and dressed for the table. Frightened half out of his wits the market man fairly "cut sticks," nor would he come back again until piggy had been removed.

But the naughtiest thing that Blitz ever did was to disturb a negro meeting some years ago in Belknap street, Boston. The story is not generally known, as it would perhaps have led to some personal trouble to him, had it been represented to the authorities.

All Boston knows of the [illegible] negro preacher, Father Snowden, who, hold forth to his cultered friends in Belk[illegible] street for so many years. It was a quiet summer's afternoon when the house was pretty well filled—there being a revival of religion going on—when Blitz with some other persons (although he is himself as dark as a mulatto, and has "curly hair" to boot) entered the house. It was pretty warm weather; but things went on nicely enough until the minister got warmed up in his subject, and was using words almost too long for a common sized dictionary, when Blitz thought it about time to do something.

"And the Lord said unto Moses"—

The congregation looked at each other with countenances darker than ever, while Father Snowden after staring behind himself seemed to come to the conclusion that the noise proceeded from the street, and so he commenced again.

"And the Lord said unto Moses"—

"Ain't you ashamed of yourself! take your hands off of me!" said a voice proceeding apparent from a very neat mulatto girl, who sat in the front pew and upon whom all eyes now turned.

"I didn't touch yer," said the man next to her in amazement.

Some smiled and said, "Sam Johnson ought to be ashamed of himself to act so in meeting," and the minister frowned upon him in a way that would have thawed a snowball outright, after which Mr. Snowden attempted once more to resume his remarks.

"And the Lord said unto Moses"—

"Well, what did he say?" came suddenly from the lips of an attentive listener in the side aisle.

The minister was astounded. He looked at the man as though his boldness had electrified him, some of the congregation began to think that under the circumstances, the inquiry was a very natural and appropriate one. As to the minister himself, he was a little vexed now and repeated with emphasis.

"And the Lord said unto Moses"—

"Fire! fire!" roared a voice which seemed to come from the entrance of the house, with startling earnestness.

This was too much to bear tamely. Even the minister rushed to the door and the affrighted women screamed like mad, and they huddled and pushed each other out of the pews and down the aisle. Bonnets suffered some on the occasion, and when they all got fairly out, they looked up to the top of the meeting house patiently, to see the flames burst through the slated roof.

INTERESTING FROM ALASKA.

HOW THEY LIVE—WHAT THEY DO.

A letter dated St. Paul's Harbor, Rodracks Island, from an officer of the U. S. Revenue Steamer Wayanda, says: We examined, on our way to this place, all the harbors of note on the coast; have found several places where coal could be mined at a profit on a small capital. In fact this country is full of coal, but a great deal of it of an inferior quality—the only good feature that I have seen so far in Alaska. Upon the whole I think the Government has an elephant in this seven million purchase.

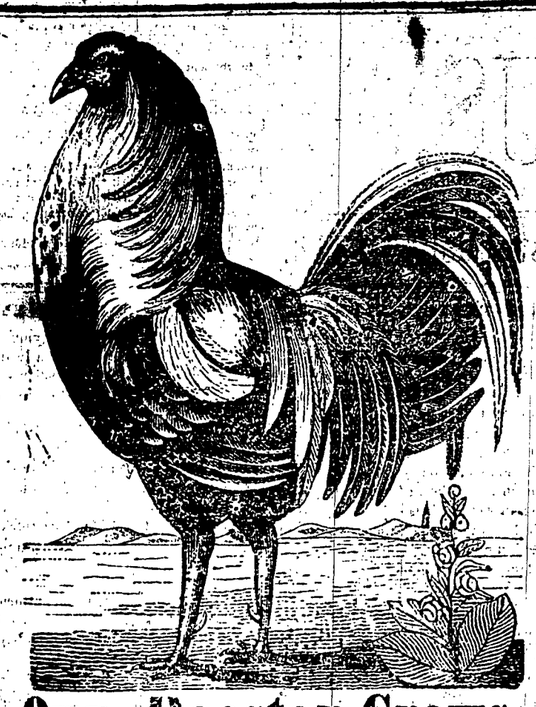
The Indians who inhabit this country are a most indolent race, particularly the southern tribes; but as we advance to the northward and westward their dispositions appear to change, owing no doubt to their intercourse with the Russians, as many of them have been converted to the Catholic faith. Far as we have gone the natives seem to be delighted by the change of Government; but I fear it will do them no good, as the traders are introducing "rum" among them, which has proved a curse to all men. During the winter months the natives are employed trapping the fur animals which abound in this country.

The natives live in a most miserable manner, their principal food being whale meat, seal and salmon; their houses are filthy, and they are filthy in person; their clothing consists principally of furs of the poorest quality, as they sell all the best skins to the traders. I find but very few old persons among them, most of them dying under forty, principally with consumption. It is constantly raining during the summer months and snowing during the winter.

At this place, on an island in the harbor, ice is collected to supply the San Francisco and China markets, the only business that pays in these regions. The weather, during the summer months, is anything but pleasant raining most of the time, but very little wind; during the winter months it is very cold, and the winds are very severe, ice forming about three feet in still water. I am told by parties living here it is hardly safe for a person to venture out during a gale.

We are now waiting the arrival of our coal, when we will proceed westward to Ounalaska, Bristol Bay, Northred Sound, and through Behring Straits to the most northren part of our possessions in the Arctic ocean. We are in hopes of getting South before the winter sets in, as it is fearful to think of spending a winter so near the north pole.

A COUNTRYMAN, walking along the streets of New York, found his progress stopped by a close barricade of lumber. "What is that for?" said he to a person in the street. "Oh, that is to stop the cholera." "Ah, I have often heard of the board of health, but I never saw one before."



Our Rooster Crows.

The Beaver Argus.

J. WEYAND, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

Beaver, Pa., November 4, 1868.

THE NEW paper project has assumed a tangible shape. Mr. Quay is the leading spirit of the enterprise—is to be editor-in chief, and to be assisted by Mr. Wharton, author of the various anti-Quay articles that have appeared from time to time in the columns of the Local. The mechanical department is to be in the hands of disaffected persons formerly employed in this office. Power presses are to be used, and the paper is to be conducted on a scale more extensive than has ever before been attempted in this region; and according to one of its most zealous advocates, will have a fund of $30,000 outside of the county, to draw upon. The impression is industriously sought to be made upon the public mind, that no war is intended to be made upon the Argus—that the enterprise is an individual one—that the wants of the county, and the interests of the party demand the establishment of another paper. Mr. Quay, and three other prominent politicians of this place and who are known to be in active sympathy with the new movement have all, at different times, within the past five years had charge of the Argus. All have admitted sustaining heavy pecuniary losses—all were exceedingly anxious to sell out. Since we assumed control of the Argus, its circulation has very nearly doubled itself. This indicates no backward step, and would seem to demonstrate that no greater need existed for a new organ now, than during any previous management. Is Mr. Quay any better fitted for editorial duty now than he was three or four years ago? If it was a losing business when there was no competition, how does he and those who are embarked with him, expect to make it profitable with a divided patronage, and the greater part of the ground already occupied? The conclusion seems irresistible that certain political schemes are to be worked out—some special interests at home or abroad are to be advanced.

The secret is just here: We are not pliant enough to suit certain views and certain individuals. We have never waged war upon a single Republican of the county; have not sought to influence nominations; have taken no active part in the contests between our party friends; have endeavored to treat all with fairness, and labored zealously for the up-building of the party. We had not been in the Argus five months until a proposition was made to buy us out entire—then for a part interest. Declining to sell, threats were resorted to—an anonymous letter was sent us, threatening to break us down by establishing a new paper—our hands were tampered with and secrets of the office wormed out of them—a scurrilous attack was made upon us by a professed Republican through the columns of the Local. A notice was affixed to our door bidding us "beware," that we were "watched," that we were "marked," and latterly efforts have been made to seduce our apprentice boys from us and into the new office.

Since the adoption of the popular vote system, the formation of the present county committee, and the Congressional struggle at Pittsburgh, the feeling against ourself and against a number of our friends, has been bitter and unrelenting, manifesting itself in various ways, and finally culminating in the starting of a new paper.

Disguised as the true object is studiously sought to be, it requires but little sagacity to fathom the real motives. It is to make war upon the re-nomination of Gov. Geary, for that was emphatically asserted as early as last spring; to rule the politics of this county as with a rod of iron; to advance the claims of a Philadelphian for U. S. Senator, so as to secure the Collectorship of Customs for a citizen of Beaver; to crush the Argus; to slaughter certain of its friends, and to leave no stone unturned to procure the nominations of special favorites.

We do not think that these well laid plans can succeed. We do not think that the Argus can be overwhelmed, even with so formidable a combination against it. It has held on in its course unfaltering for 50 years, turning neither to the right nor to the left, battling earnestly for the Right, through sunshine and storm, and laboring in season and out of season for the triumph of the principles of the party to which it was devotedly attached. We were in at the death of the Whig party, and, at the birth of the Republican party. Having assisted in wrenching the county from the grasp of the Democracy and planting the party upon a proud vantage ground, we cannot believe that our Republican friends will permit their old organ to be stricken down by men, some of whom, at least, were either not residents of the county at that period, or were connected with hostile organizations. We greatly mistake their temper, if they do not frown with indignation upon this attempt to divide the party or make it subservient to the interests of a few men.

THE COUNTRY SAVED!

Rejoice and be Merry!

Copperheadism in the Last Ditch.

REPUDIATION 'GONE UNDER!'

Thunder All Around the Sky!

Grant Elected by an Overwhelming Majority!

Beaver County Contributes Her Full Share.

The elections in this county passed off very quietly. The full vote we judge was not quite out. This result is owing to the fact that the Republicans were sanguine of success at any rate, while the Democrats virtually gave up the contest immediately after the October election. Our majority in the county exceeds 1000, and it will probably reach 1100. At this writing we have no returns from several precincts but judge the Republican majority will vary but little from 1,050. Well done. All hail Republicans of Beaver County.

PENNSYLVANIA AND THE OTHER STATES.

Pennsylvania has given Grant a majority of about 20,000. All the other Northern States, excepting New York, and it is in doubt, have gone for Grant and Peace. Of the Southern States, North Carolina, Missouri, Tennessee, Florida, South Carolina, and West Virginia have joined the Republican column, and instructed their electors to vote for the conqueror of the rebellion. The electoral college will be composed of States casting 284 votes. It is quite certain that of these Grant will have 211, and probably quite a number of others. Seymour will probably have 73 votes—given him by New York, Maryland, Georgia, Louisiana, Alabama, Kentucky, Delaware and Arkansas. Our victory is sure and overwhelming. Let us be thankful that the country is again saved, and that peace and safety will once more reign throughout its borders.

WE ARE deeply indebted to a great many leading Republicans in almost every section of the county for their kind words and proffers of fast friendship so long as the present raid continues against the Argus. Their words of cheer come from every hill-top and from every valley in the county, and the amount of indignation expressed against the disorganizing movement, above referred to, exceeds anything we have witnessed for many years.

In the meantime we can assure them and all others interested in the welfare of the Argus, that it will weather the present storm, and live to see its would-be murderers mourning over their blasted hopes, and keenly regreting the hour they concocted their unmanly scheme against it.

In a very short time it will be enlarged, printed on a power press, and otherwise improved.

THE GALLOWS IN FRANKLIN, PA.

FRANKLIN, Oct. 28, 1868.

To-day Thomas McCarty suffered the penalty inflicted by the law for the murder of David Barry, in May last, near the village of Waterloo, Venango county. From the evidence of Mrs. Barry, who was the main witness for the prosecution, it appears that the murder was coolly and deliberately commited, without any cause or provocation. McCarty came to the house of Barry, on the line of the Jamestown and Franklin Railroad, the day before the murder, and with professions of friendship ate at his table, and smoked and talked for several hours. He left about dark, and at midnight returned, and awakened Barry and desired to stay the rest of the night, pretending that he could not reach the house of a friend, with whom he wished to stop, on account of being unable to cross Sandy creek. Barry admitted him, and asked him to go to bed. McCarty said he would stay up a while and asked for a pipe and some tobacco. Barry then retired again to bed with his wife and was soon asleep. About two o'clock they were awakened by a noise resembling the snapping of a gun cap, and both sat up in bed, when McCafty stepped up to the bed and placing a revolver against Barry's breast, fired. Barry jumped to the floor, but immediately sank down insensible, and died in a few hours. McCarty fled, and was not apprehended until July 1st, when he was seen by Engineer Jones, of the Jamestown and Franklin accommodation freight train, which runs from Franklin to Girard, on the line of the Pittsburgh and Erie Railroad, between Jamestown and Girard. The train was stopped, and after considerable of a chase McCarty was overhauled and brought to this city by Engineer Jones and Conductor Belknap, who received the reward of three hundred dollars previously offered by the County Commissioners for his capture.

Preceding his trial McCafty was very jovial and good natured, protesting his innocence, and expressing the opinion that he would be acquitted; but at his trial there was no evidence offered in defence, while the evidence for the prosecution was overwhelming. The jury accordingly brought in a verdict of guilty, Judge Trunky prouounced sentence of death upon him, and this day (28th) was appointed by the Governor for his execution.

Until recently he did not appear to realize his awful situation, or otherwise had made up his mind to "die game." When the sheriff read the death warrant to him, he said that he "needn't try to scare him." As the day approached, however, he became more serious, and sent for his spiritual adviser, Father Maddigan, and seemed anxious to be prepared for that "great and awful change" which so soon awaited him.

This morning considerable excitement was manifested among our citizens, and quite a number congregated in front of the jail; but none were admitted. The time for the execution was between the hours of ten A. M. and three P. M. At ten o'clock, those who had permits or were deputized, about thirty in number, were admitted. Father Madigan, of the Roman Catholic Church, with two other Catholic ministers, whose names we did not learn, engaged with the prisoner in prayer and supplication, after which McCarty was prepared for the gallows. At half after twelve he was led forth from the cell by Sheriff Gray, followed by the ministers, and he mounted the gallows with a firm step. After the ministers had rendered the services usual on such occasions, he was asked if he had anything to say. He replied in the negative, merely bowing to those present, and standing very erect and firm. The sheriff then approached, drew the black cap over his head, placed the rope around his neck, and stepping upon the spring, at exactly fifteen minutes of one o'clock, Thomas McCarty was launched into eternity. He died without a struggle, his neck being broken. After hanging about twenty minutes, his body was examined by the physicians in attendance, and life was pronounced extinct; his body was put into a coffin and taken away.

It appears that the only confession McCarty made was to his spiritual adviser, Father Maddigan to whom he said he was guilty, deserved the punishment inflicted by the law, and that if his death would atone for his crime he was satisfied.

This is the first execution that has ever taken place in our county, and we hope it may never be necessary to have another.

Administraitor's Sale of Democratic Effects.

Since the Democratic party is dead, it is desirable that its affairs should be wound up, and its effects administered upon as speedily as possible. The following articles canstitute the bulk of personal property of the deceased party, which will be sold at public auction at an early day:

3,000,000 pairs of slave manacles (unconstitutionally damaged by Abe Lincoln. They will be sold as old iron).

300,000 slave drivers' whips (lashes considerably worn, handles in good order).

1 old window sash—somewhat damaged by fire, removed from its original place by order of Governer Vance, in order that "Yankees' might be piled so high "that their legs would stick out of the windows."

1 Lost Cause.

100,000 Grey Uniforms (badly worn).

50,000 Seymour and Blair banners (perforated with numerous holes, will be sold by the pound, for paper bags).

1 "Policy" (manufactured by the Tailor of Tennessee.)

1 Rare manuscript, being the original of Blair's Broadhead letter (interesting as an historical relic, since it was in the hands of the deceased in the hour of Death, and bears traces of tears shed by disconsolate friends on that occasion.)

1 lot of old lumber (used in the Democratic platform. Hampton's plank is in a good state of preservation.)

1 tusk of the "Democratic elephant," brokenoff (by the World's advice) in the vain attempt to hold to the ice and escape drowning

1 geological specimen of great value, being the "superfluous fragment" struck by the "stone hammer" from the igneous rock which the Democratic Ajax was unable to throw into the Republican camp on the 13th of October.

100 bales of Pendletonian greenbacks—nominal value $1,500'000,000 (will be sold by the pound. The attention of paper-makers is especially called to this item.)

These articles will be sold at as low a price and on as long a time as customers may desire, since the surviving relatives are anxious to get them out of the way as soon as possible.

THE money article of the New York Commercial Advertiser doubts if the expectation of a reaction and a condition of great permanent ease in the money market will follow the present stringency. It is of the opinion that there has been no "locking up" as has been represented. It says: "The dormant reserve of the banks has been reduced $11,500,000 within the month by the redemption of Three Per Cent. Certificates, which requires to be replaced by an equal amount of plain Legal Tenders, and the Sub-Treasury having diminished its currency balance to below $90,000,000 by these redemptions, must be expected to replenish its coffers again at an early day, taking possibly three to four millions out of the banks. Again, about the middle of November, the South begins to draw a large amount of currency from the East, and, although as that period money begins to flow in from Chicago, yet those receipts, and more, are required by Cincinnati for moving the hog crop."

A Curiosity of Literature.

HALPINE'S PRISON LIFE OF DAVIS—TRUTH STRANGER THAN FICTION.

(From the Charleston Mercury, Oct. 22.)

It is asserted that the book entitled "Prison Life of Jefferson Davis," and purporting to be the work of Dr. Craven, was written in nine days by the late General C. G. Halpine.

The above paragraph is going the rounds of the press as an item of strange news.

The book, our readers will remember, came out in New York soon after the release of Mr. Davis on bail from his imprisonment at Fortress Monroe. It was the sensation of the day, and excited deep interest for the famous prisoner, whose story of life it assumed to give. While it stirred the hearts of the Southern people, of whose lost cause he was the official head, it awakened the curiosity, removed the prejudices, and enlisted the sympathies of Northern men in behalf of one fallen from high estate, a weary, feeble captive, who yet challenges admiration for the equanimity of his bearing and the accomplishments of his mind.

Our readers will be astonished to learn that the statement is true, and that this popular book, over which so much of feeling, of indignation, pity, interest, and admiration has been created and expended, is a work of imagination—a novel woven upon slender threads of fact.

Soon after the admission of Mr. Davis to bail, Craven, the surgeon of the post, went to New York, where he met his quondam messmate of the same staff, General Halpine. This literary friend congratulated him forthwith on this opportunity he had to immortalize himself in print and at the same time make money by a book on Jeff Davis. The idea seemed new to Mr. Craven, and he said it was impracticable. Halpine asked him where were his notes? He replied, "he had none, and could not do it." "Then," said Halpine, "give me whatever materials you have and I will write in your name, and we will share the profits." This was agreed to.

Craven furnished three letters of Mrs. Davis to him, and some notes written on the margin of a Herald by Mr. Davis, touching the points he desired Reverdy Johnson to make in defending him for treason. This was all the authentic matter supplied.

At the request of General Halpine, Craven also made out a list of the officers of the post and their days for going on duty, and other little details of the post and garrison and of Mr. Davis.

Halpine then called to see several Confederates in New York, and among others General Dick Taylor. He pumped them as to Mr. Davis, his views and opinions on public matters; also in regard to leading Southern men and Mr Davis' relations and feelings towards them, &c.

A Philadelphia publishing house now advertised that it was soon to put forth a life of Davis; and Halpine saw the importance of anticipating this publication of his book. It was arranged in New York to get it out immediately. He agreed to furnish his publisher forty pages of closely manuscript daily. And he sat down to write—and wrote forty pages daily for nine days, when the book was completed—the web of his fertile brain and accomplished mind.

The book was of great service to Mr. Davis; and General Halpine's share of profits was $7,000 last March, when he communicated to us the above facts from his own graphic and eloquent lips.

This is one of the curiosities of literature and illustrates the talents of the man who could so plausibly manufacture out of whole cloth the "Prison Life of Jefferson Davis," with his private views and opinions concerning men and things.

Thanksgiving Proclamations.

COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA, ss:

Unto God, our Creator, we are indebted for life and all its blessings. It, therefore, becomes us at all times to render unto Him the homage of grateful hearts; and in the performance of our sacred music, to set apart special periods to "enter into His gates with thanksgiving and into His courts with praise." For this purpose, and in accordance with an established custom, I have designated THURSDAY, the [illegible] DAY OF NOVEMBER next, and I recommend that the people of this Commonwealth on that day refrain from their usual avocations and pursuits, and assemble at their chosen places of worship, to "praise the name of God and magnify Him with thanksgiving," devoutly to acknowledge their dependence, and lay upon his altars the cheerful offerings of grateful hearts.

Let us thank Him with Christian humility for health and prosperity, abundant harvests, the protection of commerce, and advancement of scientific, mechanical and manufacturing interests; our progress in education, morality, virtue and social order; the increase of our material wealth; exemption from pestilence and contagious diseases and the destructive influences of war; for having blessed us as a people and a nation, and opened before us the brightest prospects for the future; and for all other blessings, both temporal and spiritual.

With sure reliance upon Divine favor let us pray for the forgiveness of our sins, making public confession of our dependence, that we may continue worthy of His parental love and protecting care; that our civil and religious liberties and political rights may remain unimpared; that we may remember with gratitude our country's brave defenders, and cherish with sympathy their widows and orphan children; and that our paths through life may be directed by the example and instructions of the Redeemer, who died that we might enjoy all the blessings which temporarily flow therefrom, and eternal life in the world to come.

Given under my hand and the Great Seal of the State, at Harrisburg, this twenty-eighth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty eight, and of the Commonwealth the ninety third.

JOHN W. GEARY.

By the Governor:

F. JORDAN, Sec'y of the Commonwealth.

Murder in Butler County Pa.

Death by Poison—Arrest of a Wife and Alleged Paramour on Suspicion of Poisoning the Former's Husband.

BUTLER PA. Oct. 27th, 1868.

Mr. Jacob Shugart, a resident of this place, was out husking corn on Monday, the 10th instant, and to all appearances was in his usual health. His little daughter took out for him about dinner time some soup, of which he ate. Not long after he had eaten it, he was taken with violent cramps in the stomach, so much so that he was unable to stand. A neighbor going by in a buggy, Shugart motioned with his hand for him. On going to him he found Mr. S. very ill, but was enabled to get him home. In a half hour after his arrival home he was a corpse. Mr. Shugart was a hard working and industrious citizen. His funeral took place on the Wednesday following his death.

Since writing the above, Mrs. Shugart and a German by the name of Martin, have been arrested on suspicion of poisoning him, and are now in prison to await further investigations. We understand that the contents of the stomach have been analyzed and the presence of arsenic discovered. We forbear saying anything further as the whole matter will under go judicial investigation.

GEN. FORREST, the butcher of Fort Pillow, and Basil Duke, who spent a Winter in the Ohio Penitentiary, think Gen. Kilpatrick is not a gentleman. Thereupon one of the men wants to shoot him, and the other wants to load the pistol; and to bring about this happy consummation, Gen. Forrest fills the Memphis papers with a letter denouncing Kilpatrick in unmeasured terms, and defying him to mortal combat. Kilpatrick has done his share in fighting brave Rebels; he can afford now to ignore the bullies.—N. Y. Tribune.

Who Are Extravagant?

The cost of the civil administration of the Government under President Lincoln—not withstanding the war—was one half less than under Buchanan, and nearly one half less than under Johnson; consequently, the ordinary receipts from customs, without increase of the tariff, would not only have met all the expenses of Government, but would have left a large surplus in the Treasury, had not its expenditure been required in suppressing the Democratic rebellion.

Expenditures of the Government for the civil administration for the eight years named:

1860, Buchanan,	$45,790,058
1861, Lincoln,	25,081,510
1862, "	21,408,401
1863, "	23,253,923
1864, "	27,800,409
1865, Johnson	40,340,558
1866, "	42,420,820
1867, "	52,098,121
1868, "	52,755,028

Compare, carefully, each year under President Lincoln with 1860, and with each of the years under Johnson.

A Good Institution.—The State Normal School is an excellent school. For further information address J. A. Cooper, Edinboro, Erie Co., Pa.

The Walnut Trade.—The walnut trade in this vicinity is pretty brisk at the present time. Black walnuts are selling at $1 per bushel. The supply is unequal to the demand.

A suitable reward will be given to the person returning a revolver which was left in one of the rear buildings of the Court House on last Saturday between 3 and 4 P. M. Call at the Treasurer's office.

Radical Restoration.—Its good effects are permanent. It not only restores the color of the hair, but the quantity and natural glossiness. This is said by every one using Mrs. S. A. Allen's Improved (new style) Hair Restorer or Dressing, (in one bottle.) Every Druggist sells it. Price One Dollar. 4t.

Brought Home.—About one year ago, a married daughter of Mr. John S. Sheplar, of Bridgewater, died at New Orleans. After her death her child also died, and both were buried in that city. During the latter part of last week the remains of both were brought to Bridgewater, and buried again from Mr. Sheplar's residence on last Saturday.

Public Lectures.—We are under obligations to Benj. F. Jennings, Esq., Chairman of the Lecture Committee of the Young Men's Mercantile Library Association, of Pittsburgh, for a season ticket to their lectures. We shall avail ourself of the privilege of attending quite frequently during the season. See advertisement of the Lecture Committee in another column.

Dead.—The little child found near the railroad, at Baden, in this county, a couple of weeks ago, and noticed at the time in the ARGUS, died on last Saturday. It was adopted by a family named Stough, who took the best possible care of the little stranger until its death. They had given it the name Mary Stough soon after it was taken into their family.

Teachers' Institute.—As the election are now past we suppose the excitement of the same will soon subside. We now propose to again open our Institute at the public school building of this place. And as the assistance rendered us heretofore has been quite liberal, and we have had a full house at most of our meetings, we have reason to hope it will meet with similar favor again. Therefore we will announce that Thursday evening, Nov. 12th, at 6½ P. M., Institute will convene at the usual place, to which all wishing to participate in the exercises or otherwise encourage the Institute are respectfully invited.

Sorghum.—Richard Walton, Esq., of Industry township, knows how to do the "handsome thing" with the printer. Along about the 1st of November every year, he makes the ARGUS a donation of a jug filled with Sorghum of his own manufacture. On last Tuesday his annual visit was made to this office, and with genial face and jug in hand, he left us as much of the "sweet" as will carry us up to Christmas. Mr. Walton's family understand how to make sorghum, as the sample left us is a tip-top article. Long may the friendly donor wave, and may he live to catch foxes and vote the Republican ticket for at least one hundred years to come.

Thieving in New Brighton.—On last Wednesday night or the person or persons unknown entered the dwelling of Mr. J. B. Anderson, of New Brighton, and robbed it of about $500,00, besides taking a gold watch.

The thieves next visited the residence of B. R. Bradford, Esq., and succeeded in obtaining about $175,00 in cash, Mr. B.'s gold watch and overcoat. A small gold watch owned by Willie, Mr. Bradford's son, also fell into the hands of the marauders. No clue to the perpetrators of the villainy has yet been obtained. The entrance to both of the dwellings was effected by forcing open the window shutters.

On Oct. 18th two prisoners, Anderson and King, escaped from the Greensburg (Westmoreland county) jail. It appears they got into the vault, and from there to a recess between the northern outside wall and the jail. Going to work with a case knife, they tore down a nine inch brick wall exposing the outer wall which is of cut stone. A few minutes sufficed to remove the cement from around one of the stones, and soon they were at liberty. As it was election day, and plenty of persons passing and repassing, it is rather strange that they were not detected. Next day Anderson was recaptured, but King has managed to clear of the ministers of justice.

Independent People.—"God never made an independent man," is an axiom as old, almost, as the world itself, and so true that it has received the common consent of every rational and well thinking person. We are all dependent upon each other. The rich are dependent upon the poor and the poor upon the rich. Capital would be dead and unavailable without labor, and labor would be inactive and of no consequence without capital. United, they control and regulate the society and the world—divided, they are both valueless. The man who lays the brick in our houses earns the money which he receives for the service from his more wealthy neighbor. The labor and the price of it furnish material aid and reciprocal dependence. We should remember these things when we are disposed to regard ourselves as entirely independent. The wealthy, especially, should remember them, for their lands could not be tilled, or even their horses shod and harnessed, without the aid of the strong and the muscular arm which holds the plough and wields the hammer.

To Whom it May Concern.—This is to give notice that I intend to defend the Seminary premises from the rowdyism that has lately occurred there and which is a disgrace to our town.

R. T. TAYLOR.

Beaver Nov. 2d, 1868.

New Lisbon Post Office Robbed.—Last Friday night some person or persons effected an entrance through a window in the rear of the post office building, Walnut street, and bursting open a desk containing stamps and stamped envelopes, secured some $300 worth. It is thought no letters were taken. No clue has been found to the robbers. Scarce a year has passed since Postmaster Robinson was relieved of between $300 and $300 in money belonging to the office.

Before and After.—Before Gen. Grant made a distinct avowal of his political sentiments the Democratic papers spoke of him as follows:

BEFORE.

An example of magnanimity.
A great captain.
The stuff of which statesmen are made.
A leader of rare endowments.
The man whose valor saved the country.
The conqueror of the rebellion.
The hero of many victories.
The savior of our institutions.

AFTER

he had come out Republican they talked about him thus:

A general whose victories were too costly to be valuable.
The lucky man to whom Lee surrendered, when he ought to have surrendered to Lee.
The military blunderer.
The butcher of the national army.
The brainless tanner who aspired to military honors.
A man who needlessly sacrificed 100,000 lives in his Potomac campaign.
Notoriously a disregarder of truth.

The Butler Herald says: On Saturday evening last, about seven o'clock, while George C. McCandless, of Franklin township, this county, was eating supper with his family, a shot was fired through the window, killing his daughter, Miss Ann McCandless instantly, and wounding Mr. McCandless slightly in the head. About twenty-four slugs or shot entered the head of the young lady, lacerating her terribly in the face. Whether pistol or gun was used is not known. A young man by the name of Zachary Taylor Hockinberry was arrested on suspicion, and is now lodged in jail to await trial. It appears Hockinberry desired to pay his addresses to the young lady, which she refused to receive.

Deaths.

The deceased was a member of the Covenanter, now Reformed Presbyterian Church for many years. He was a good citizen, a kind neighbor and an affectionate father. His wife and daughter died 18 years ago, his eldest son fell in the first battle before Richmond, and his youngest son followed two before to the haven of rest just 28 days before his father. He leaves a son and a daughter to mourn their loss, yet they mourn not as those without hope. He lived a life of Piety, and has entered into the glorious rest prepared for the redeemed at the right hand of God.

The oldest tannery, it is said, in the United States is located at Bethlehem, Pa. It was built by the Moravians in 1743, and enlarged by them in 1761. Eleven vats, sunk at that time, are still in use, though they have been repaired on several occasions. The building is of stone, three stories high, and the walls on the first story are thirty inches thick, and above that twenty-six and twenty inches. This old structure, now used for tanning purposes, was purchased some four years ago by Mr. Lewis R. Gerlock.

A "COME DOWN."—General Magruder was arrested in New York city for drunkenness and disorderly conduct, put in the lock-up and put under bonds to keep the peace for six months. "How are the mighty fallen!" Gen Magruder, at the commencement of the war held a high rank in our army. He was given a very high rank in the Confederate army—only Lee, Johnston, and Beauregard were above him. He commanded the little Confederate army which stopped McClellan so long at Yorktown. "Now, none so poor as to do him reverence."

THE "Louisiana Tigers," were a famous regiment in the Rebel army from first Bull Run until nearly annihilated in a desperate charge on the Union lines at Gettysburgh. In a work by a member of that organization who was wounded and captured in that charge, the incitements to Lee's wild advance into Pensylvania are thus set forth:

"Our officers had been assured that the Northern party opposed to the war would rally such a force against the draft in New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore, as to cause a serious diversion in our favor, and crown with success our glorious cause.

"It was currently reported and fully believed through all the army of Gen. Lee that Vallandigham and other leading Democrats of Ohio, New York and Penna., had arranged a plan by which risings and riotous meetings should be inaugurated on the 4th of July in all the great Northern cities. The scheme failed, except in New York, and there it came so late as to be of no avail in our behalf at the Gettysburgh battle."

INFORMATION TO RAILROAD TRAVELERS.—The following Rules of the Road" are based upon legal decisions, and ought to be universally made known. The courts have decided that applicants for tickets on railroad can be ejected if they do not offer the exact amount of their fare. Conductors are not bound to make change. All railroad tickets are good until used; conditions "good for this day only," or otherwise admitting time of genuineness, are of no account. Passengers who lose their tickets can be ejected from the cars unless they purchase a second one. Passengers are bound to observe decorum in the cars, and are obliged to comply with all reasonable demands to show their tickets. Standing on the platform or otherwise violating the rules of the company, renders a person liable to be put off the train. No person has a right to appropolize more seats than he has paid for; any article left in a seat while the owner is temporarily absent, entitles him to his seat on his return.

A question that excites considerable attention arose in the Salisbury district at the recent election. It appears that C. Pusey Thorne, son of J. Williams Thorne, came of age on the day of the election. The Copperheads, anxious to exclude every Republican ballot, challenged his vote upon the ground that he was not born until seven o'clock in the evening, at which time the law provides that the polls should close. It was argued on behalf of the applicant—and correctly too—that the law recognized no fractions of days and that he was entitled to vote even though he had not been born until 11 o'clock and 59 minutes P. M. on said day. The Democratic election officers, however, contended that he must be between the age of twenty-one and twenty-two years, and that he would not have reached that period until the hour of seven had passed. In reply to this Mr. Thorne, Sr., asked the officers if they recognized 365 days and 6 hours as a year, and they replied that they did. He then showed that six leap years had occurred during the lifetime of his son; and further mathematically demonstrated that he had lived 21 times 365 days and 6 hours and had eighteen hours to spare. This rather dumbfounded the Democratic officers, but they still declined to accept the ballot. At three minutes before seven o'clock the Republican judge took the ballot and deposited it in the box, much to the chagrin of the very intelligent Democracy! The vote was perfectly legal—as the law does not recognize any fractions of days, it did not matter at what hour in the day he was born!—Chester Co. Republican.

EDITOR ARGUS.—During the late war, and in one of the many battles in the Shenandoah, it is authentically reported that Stonewall Jackson once dressed a member of his staff in a Federal uniform, and sent him to the Commander of a Union brigade with a written order, purporting to come from Gen. Shields, to throw his troops hurriedly across a small river that lay in his front. The Federal brigadier supposing the order to be genuine hastened to obey it, and had his command well nigh over the stream when Gen. Shields, in great surprise happened to notice the movement of his subordinate and ordered it stopped instantly, and inquired what it meant. Of course it was ascertained to be a forgery, and intended to divide and capture about one-half of the Union force.

This circumstance in the military history of the country is recalled to my mind by a movement on foot in Beaver at the present time. Mr. O. P. Wharton came to this county a couple of years ago. He took his place in the column of the political enemy at once. He has been in their ranks continuously from that time until a month or so ago. Now he is ostensibly over in the Republican party, and rumor has it that he is to be one of the editors of the disorganizing sheet to be established in this county within a few days. Is it not probable, to say the least of it, that one or two scheming Democrats have put a Union uniform upon him, sent him over into the loyal lines for the purpose of dividing our party, so that they, Stonewall Jackson like, may capture a portion of our force?

The Howe Sewing Machines

ARE THE

OLDEST ESTABLISHED

OF ANY IN THE WORLD!

THEY BEING THE FIRST SEWING MACHINES ever made, and have been manufactured continually under the supervision of the original inventor,

Elias Howe, jr.,

Since their first introduction 1845. Sheir movements upon these machines made within the last two years and their rapidly growing popularity attests the fact that they have reached the very acme of perfection, and that they are not only the oldest established but the best in the world.

These machines do perfect work upon all fabrics whether fine or coarse, making a stitch; also, the invention of Mr. Howe alike upon both of the fabric, Sewed. The tensions, new, novel and unvarying, can be adjusted to any degree of tightness, and after being adjusted do not require changing, except for different threads.

To those who have used the Howe Machine, it is not necessary for us to speak; and we would only add to others who wish a perfect machine to be sure and see these machines before buying any other. Send for circular. Applications for agencies must be addressed to
